Baby does not venture near Rose or Daisy, for she stands rather in awe of the terrible sharp horns. Then Baby makes Nurse take her down the drive, out at the gates, and on to the hillside, where some of papa s hunters are turned out at times; and one especial favourite of the baby is found here. This is a dear little colt, that has learnt to know Baby quite well, and when he sees the little toddling figure labouring up the hill beside Nurse, the colt leaves his mother s side and runs to meet her. Then Nurse lifts the baby up to stroke the little tame creature s nose, and finds a bit of sugar or biscuit, to feed him with; after which, off scampers Master Colt with his heels in the air, and Miss Baby and Nurse make their way back to the house, and then the active part of Baby s morning is over, for in a few minutes after her return to her nursery, she is lying with her rosy cheek on the pillow, and the bright eyes are closed for their mid-day sleep. STOP THIEF! UNT JANE was going to have a garden-party last July; and last July Lily and Maurice were staying at Aunt Jane s country house. This garden-party was a source of great excitement to every one in and about the establishment, I must tell you. Such a number of people...
